IDAHO

Agriculture Facts 2015

Agriculture in Idaho

Agriculture is vital to the state's economy. Idaho's 25,000 farms and ranches produce more than 185 different commodities and the state ranks in the top ten in the nation in 30 of them. Idaho is the third-largest agricultural state in the West and second in net farm income.

Cash receipts for 2015 are estimated to be $7.9 billion. Food and beverage processing contributes another $8.5 billion in sales and is Idaho's second largest manufacturing sector. Idaho is home to big-name manufacturers and established brands as well as niche suppliers of specialty foods and beverages. From fries to cheese to wine, Idaho is producing quality products to feed the world. Together, agriculture and food processing are the backbone of much of rural Idaho generating 21% of Idaho's total economic output in sales and 16% of GDP.

Idaho is most famous for its potatoes. But it is also well known for being a seed capitol in the country, if not the world. Idaho grows 70% of the hybrid temperate sweet corn seed produced globally and ranks among the leading suppliers of alfalfa, field bean, garden bean, and Kentucky bluegrass seed in the nation. Idaho vegetable seed production includes carrot, onion, turnip, lettuce and many more.

Idaho's growing wine and viticulture industry is also gaining recognition. Idaho now has two American Viticulture Areas (AVA). The first, the Snake River Valley AVA was designated in 2007. The second, the Eagle Foothills AVA, was approved in 2015 and is the first to be fully contained within Idaho's borders. A third AVA, the Lewis-Clark AVA, is expected to be approved in late 2016.
